9/11 Rescue heroes become victims:

Rescue volunteer workers have become health victims of 9/11 clean up efforts. Toxic air found at ground zero is being linked to lung disease and possibly cancer – but also heart attacks. The thousands of firefighters, police, EMTs, construction workers, immigrant labors and residents are added to the growing number of victims who were killed in the Twin Towers attack on 9/11. Dr. Stephen Levin, of the WTC medical monitoring program at Mount Sinai School of Medicine in Manhattan says, "There is an increased risk of heart problems from lung disease."

Most off duty Volunteers are not covered by Workmen Compensation Insurance because of their volunteer status or off duty efforts. Most attorneys' that looked at the case did not want to get involved. David Worby became their champion, lawyer representing more than 10,000 WTC workers in a class-action lawsuit. David Worby says, "about six men in their 30's or 40's with no family history of coronary disease have died of heart attacks so far. Hundreds more will die prematurely." To increase public awareness David Worby has had television appearances which include 60 Minutes with Katy Couric, ABC Good Morning America, CBS News, CNN, NBC Nightly News, Fox News and more. David Worby has become a national spokesperson for victims' rights. For more in-depth information visit www.davidworbyproductions.com
